Community rallies for the freedom of 13 Iranian Jews

By Stacia Benovitch,
Associate Director,
Community Relations Committee

Over 150 members of the Ottawa Jewish community gathered on Sunday, June 27, to show support for 13 Iranian Jews being held on espionage charges. The "Prayer and Protest" was held in front of the Embassy of Iran on Metcalfe Street. Toronto, Montreal, Calgary and Winnipeg also held rallies to send a strong message to the Iranian government that their brethren have not been forgotten.

The event began with an 8:00 am Minyan with over 60 men, draped in talleisim and tefillin, standing on a staircase directly facing the embassy.

Rabbis and cantors from all segments of the Jewish community joined in leading the service of solidarity with the imprisoned Jews. After Cantors Daniel Benlolo and Pinchas Levinson's singing of O Canada and Hatikvah, Rabbis Ely Braun, Howard Finkelstein and Steven Garten read from Psalms. Stacia Benovitch of the Vaad Ha'ir

Donna Dolansky to chair UJA Women's Campaign

By Paula Smith

Donna Dolansky has been named chair of the 2000 United Jewish Appeal Women's Campaign. The announcement was made by General Chair Ron Cherney.

Donna is well known in the community as an enthusiastic participant and effective volunteer in a wide array of organizations. She is delighted to be taking on this position and is looking forward to this new challenge at the turn of the century.

Donna grew up in Winnipeg and Montreal. She obtained her bachelor of science from McGill University and a master's degree in biochemistry from the State University of New York. When she arrived in Ottawa in 1973 together with husband, Bernie, a newly graduated endodontist and baby daughter Shawna, she knew only two people. But her early commitment to volunteer activities helped her to make friends and feel at home almost immediately. Donna said that the Ottawa community has always felt friendly and welcoming to her and she believes that it remains

Ron Cherney to head UJA Millennium Campaign

By Paula Smith

The chair of the 2000 United Jewish Appeal Campaign, Ron Cherney, is looking forward to the challenge of this millenium campaign. With significantly higher financial goals and a completely restructured campaign cabinet, there is a sense of freshness and newness to the planning process that is already operating in high gear.

This campaign will focus on the theme of "Changing Lives." There are at least two interpretations for this catch-phrase. It means that with a successful campaign the community will be in a position to offer a higher quality of services to the campaign beneficiaries. It also means that the benefits of involvement in the community and the campaign itself will be the icing on the cake for the participants.

Beyond the goal of raising over three million dollars this year, a significant increase over the past few campaigns, Ron has also set the involvement of new people as a priority. He expressed a real hope of getting participation from both newcomers to Ottawa as well as long-time residents who are disconnected from the community.

"I am extremely happy that Stan Katz has agreed to be deputy chair of this campaign," said Ron. "He will definitely give an added boost to the campaign with his extensive knowledge and understanding of the community. He is a tremendous asset to have on board. Together with Donna Dolansky as chair of Women's Division, who is known to be a dedicated and hard-working UJA volunteer, the team will come together to achieve these outstanding goals."

Ron noted the debt that he owed to Linda Nadolny-Cogan as his predecessor for making the possibility of a three million dollar campaign this year a reality. He said that he is thrilled that she will continue to help in

Despite the record-high temperature, Laya and Sol Shabinaky, along with 144 other participants, enjoyed a day on the links at the 6th Annual UJA Golf Tournament held July 5 at Rideau View Golf and Country Club. Another record was set with the $50,000 raised for UJA.

Community mourns passing of Lorry Greenberg

With the passing of Lorry Greenberg on June 30, the City of Ottawa lost a favourite son and stalwart champion. More than 800 longtime friends and colleagues filed into Agudath Israel Synagogue on July 2 to join his grieving family in paying their last respects to the colorful former mayor who, in his too-short lifetime, won the admiration and esteem of all who knew him.

Lorry Greenberg, the youngest and last surviving of the late Roger and Rose Greenberg's seven children, was born in Ottawa 65 years ago. In 1974, his election as the first Jewish Mayor of Ottawa brought honor to the Greenberg family as well as to the larger Jewish Community.

The story of Roger Greenberg's family's meteoric rise from poverty to prominence and success in the building industry is the stuff of which legends are made. However, neither Lorry nor his siblings ever forgot their humble beginnings, the importance of family, nor their strong ties to Judaism and the Jewish community. These truths were evident in the eloquent tributes paid to Lorry at his funeral by family members and clergy. While his political accomplishments were acknowledged with due pride, it was Lorry Greenberg the man, the Jew, the father and family patriarch who was remembered with feeling.

Speaking on behalf of his mother and his siblings, son Jeff said, "My father earned the titles His Worship, Mr. Chairman, Sir, Laser and Killer. But," Jeff said, "the titles that meant the most to him were the unofficial ones: Lorry, daddy, uncle, cousin or grandpa."

Reflecting on his father's love of politics and his pleasure at being courted by both the Liberal and Conservative parties to run for federal political office, Jeff noted, "My father also loved the simple pleasures of life. Walks with his dog, gardening, cooking and kibbitzing."

He recalled his father's abiding faith in Judaism and his devotion to carrying on Jewish traditions. "Shabbat was a time for our family to gather," he said. "My sisters like to say that Friday night dinner was the testing ground for prospective suitors. If they could make it through a Greenberg Sabbath dinner, they passed."

"The head of our family table may sit empty," Jeff said, "but in our minds and hearts he will forever be there. His zest for life, his stories, his lessons, his love will live on."

Rabbi Arnold Fine, spiritual leader of Agudath Israel Congregation, remembered his longtime congregant fondly. "Lorry Greenberg delighted in being an iconoclast and was not bound by the need to act conventionally," he said. "On occasion I jokingly challenged him about not wearing a kaskite in the synagogue. Whenever he did have one on, I asked him what special event he was marking."

"Lorry, however, never hesitated to tie on his tefillin every day," Fine said. "He took the commandment to do so very seriously. I noticed that since his first heart attack this mitzvah was an important part of Lorry's routine, both in the home and in the synagogue."

"A few months ago he came to mark a Yahrzeit at morning services without his tefillin. I asked him why and he said he had already done his prayers. But, of course, he needed to be with the community to recite the requisite prayers of mourning and he, therefore, came for that, too. This was such a part of who he was."

Rabbi Reuven Bulka, spiritual leader of Congregation Machzikei Hadas, recalled Lorry Greenberg's legendary irreverence which, he said, was always used for the express desire to break down barriers. "Lorry was sometimes irreverent but never irrelevant," said Bulka. "He could be sharp and sometimes we did not know whether he was serious or joking until he winked that famous Lorry Greenberg wink."

"Lorry had zero tolerance for dishonesty," he said. "He was at all times a champion of fairness. Fairness in government, fairness in community, fairness among people. He did not automatically support the underdog. As a peacemaker, he supported what he thought was fair and did so with flair, with energy, with firmness."

"Lorry stepped out on a limb in a way that he was uniquely able, for the simple purpose of conflict resolution. When he saw that there was an issue among people or organizations, he stepped in with one focus: to try to resolve the situation. He would have been the first to admit that he was not successful in all these mediations but what he did succeed in was that he always promoted better understanding. He started his career life as a builder," said Bulka. "But later on he excelled in removing facades."

Although by today's standards, Lorry Greenberg's life was brief, his was a life that impacted on many people. He leaves his wife, Carol and their children Rhonda, (Rob Kall) Jeff (Leanne), Roger, Stephanie and Heather, five grandchildren, and a loving extended family. And he leaves a whole community that regarded him as a beloved and devoted friend.

The following is excerpted from the tribute to his Uncle Lorry delivered by his great-nephew, Lee Greenberg.

My hero, my uncle

My grandfather, my father's father, Louis Greenberg, died six weeks before I was born. I was to be the first of the next generation of Greenbergs in Ottawa. I can only imagine what sense of loss my parents must have been feeling then. My mother tells the story though, that as she went into labor she was having a snack with Aunt Carol and Uncle Lorry at Nate's.

How apt: that such an important moment occurred over a bowl of pickles and a paper place-mat; that there were Uncle Lorry and Aunt Carol, who would become to me, in the amount of love and respect that I felt for them, the grandparents that I never wanted for.

Uncle Lorry was my hero: brave, bold, capable, funny,

The right reaction

It was only a few months ago that we were rocked by the vicious shooting attack in Littleton, Colorado, at Columbine High School, followed by a "copy cat" incident in Taber, Alberta.

The shock has worn off, but it would be foolhardy to return to business as usual. For the maimed, and for the friends and families of the victims, return to business as usual is hardly a possibility. The scars are indelibly imprinted in their souls.

It is understandable that as a result of these heinous crimes, people at all levels of leadership should desire to correct what is wrong in society.

The wrong reaction is to rush to impose more gun control. The guns used were already illegal. Personally, I shiver even when I hold a toy gun, but it is foolhardy to think that banning more guns will affect the outbreaks of violence.

We need to ask why people resort to violence. We need to look seriously at whether we are promoting violence as a response to situations in which we do not get our way. It is so much easier to point fingers at the guns, and blame them for the problems we face, rather than facing up to the harsh reality that we may be more complicit in the problem than we wish to acknowledge.

Piped into Canada on a daily basis is a TV program wherein people are paraded in front of a live audience, and invariably land up punching, slapping and mauling each other after exhausting all sorts of unprintable insults hurled at each other.

It is physical violence following closely on the heels of verbal violence. And why the violence? Because one party feels aggrieved at not getting what he or she wants, or having it taken away (usually a sleeping "partner").

Have you heard anyone in the vast array of soul-searching solution givers suggest that we look at the affects of such garbage on the adult mind-set, and what is the affect of the adult mind-set on the teen mind-set? In the name of ratings, which this aforementioned program has succeeded in garnering, anything goes. But the anything that is going is the sacred value of life, and along with this, the vital lesson that when things do not go our way, we may try to do our best to retrieve but never at the sacrifice of our soul.

FROM THE PULPIT

RABBI REUVEN BULKA

Ugly values engender ugly deeds, but noble values generate lovely deeds.

In that regard, we need not look too far for wonderful examples.

I met one just a few days ago. Her name is Diane Craig. She is the mother of Sandrine Craig, the 11-year-old who was killed in a school bus crash a little while ago.

Diane did not get her way. Her precious daughter was snatched away in the early prime of a budding life.

She had every reason to be bitter, but instead turned this horrible tragedy into a triumph of the human spirit. Sandrine's organs were donated to six other people, who now have a new lease on life.

But that is not all. Diane, together with devoted friends and eager volunteers, set into motion a campaign to sign organ donor cards that is literally unprecedented. In the space of a few weeks, over 100,000 organ donor cards were distributed.

From a tragic death has come the gift of life to who knows how many people. All of this because the victim of a tragedy, devastated as she was, managed to muster the courage and the determination to find meaning in her loss, and to share that meaning with others.

This is the stuff on which society thrives. This is the right stuff, the right reaction.

this campaign.

A relative newcomer to Ottawa, Ron Cherney grew up in Gimli, Manitoba, and attended the University of Manitoba. He came to Ottawa in 1975 to work for the federal government. That was a fortuitous move because he met his future wife, Ellen Nadolny, while here. After a two-year posting to London, U.K., Ron returned to Ottawa and made the move to the private sector. Together with partner Stanley Arron, Ron runs three communications companies, Message Centre (paging), ActionRF (point to point and multipoint radio communications) and Axis (cellular phones). When he is not at work, he can be found at home with Ellen and their four children, Allison, Jason, Carolyn and Daniel.

Beyond his commitment to these business operations, Ron has always made time to help out in the community. He has worked as a volunteer for United Way of Ottawa-Carleton, held numerous positions from canvasser and cabinet member in past UJA campaigns to deputy chair last year, and has been a trustee of the Vaad Ha'ir.

He said that his parents-in-law, Dorothy and Herb Nadolny, have set a wonderful example for him to follow by their extensive involvement in the community in a myriad of activities and that he is counting on their guidance as he heads this campaign. He also said that he could not have agreed to take on this commitment without the wholehearted support of his wife Ellen who has been a UJA volunteer herself through the years, including chairing the Women's Campaign.

the same today for any newcomer who is interested in becoming a part of the community.

Donna's volunteer activities began in Ottawa when she joined Hadassah, eventually becoming president of her chapter. In the years since she has been president of the Agudath Israel Synagogue Sisterhood and remains on the board. Donna has been president of the Talmud Torah Afternoon School, remains a trustee of the Vaad Ha'ir and on its Planning and Priorities Committee, and sits on the Board of Jewish Education. On top of all these responsibilities, Donna works part time in her husband's dental practice.

The opportunity to bring new people into the UJA campaign and into the orb of Ottawa's Jewish community is one of the side benefits that Donna hopes to accomplish during her term as chair of Women's Campaign. She explained that it is much easier to feel a part of the community and recognize its needs if one is involved. She described her philosophy as "tachlis", working with the grassroots of the community in order to broaden participation and welcome newcomers.

Donna spoke about two new initiatives in Women's Campaign this year. A committee headed by Rose Taylor and Ingrid

Donna Dolansky

Levitz will be seeking to encourage new endowments to the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation that will ensure a long-term continuing source of income to UJA. Deborah Saginur and Roz Fremeth are heading another new committee with the goal of educating donors about the community in order to encourage increased participation and contributions to the campaign.

Donna highlighted the theme for the August 18 UJA Team 2000 Workshop with Jonathan Miller, which will focus on negotiating an increase in pledges. She said that the campaign's higher financial target will necessitate specialized canvasser training in order to reach the new goal.

Donna has also agreed to head Partnership 2000. This project, involving five Canadian Jewish communities and five communities in Northern Israel including Metula and Kiryat Shemona will involve an interchange of ideas as well as actual travel exchanges of students and teachers.

Donna has been married to Bernie for 30 years and has three children, Shawna Dolansky Overton, a PhD student in Jewish History at the University of California at San Diego, Eric, who is working in Toronto, and Gillian, a student at the University of Toronto.

and Rubin Friedman of B'nai Brith Canada read the names of the 13 Jewish prisoners. David Pratt, MP, delivered a message from the government of Canada, expressing concern for the safety and well-being of the captives. Rabbi Reuven Bulka spoke forcefully of the injustices to the Iranian Jews and the need for the Jewish Diaspora to join hands in the fight for freedom and human rights. Sephardic concert with Ensemble Zafiro

Come to the Joseph and Rose Ages Family Building on Sunday, August 8 at 7:30 pm and treat yourself to an evening of beautiful Ladino music with Kathryn Palmer and her group Ensemble Zafiro.

The music, which came out of Spain in 1492 with the Jewish expulsion, is an exotic blend of flamenco, folk, classical, and "world beat".

Ensemble Zafiro has expanded to include master oud player, Jamal Kassiss. The oud is an ancient Arabic lute, forerunner of the guitar, and adds a delicious Middle Eastern flavor to the sound.

Other members of the ensemble are: violinist Mark Friedman, a long-time member of the NAC orchestra; cellist Joan Harrison, who can also be heard at the NAC as well as in the Baroque ensemble Grupetto; Drew Gonsalves, whose flamenco guitar -playing dazzled the audience at his Agudath Israel debut concert; and newcomers Alvero de Minaya and Dan Sauvé, playing an array of Latin and Middle Eastern percussion instruments.

Soprano Kathryn Palmer is the group's founder and artistic director. She also arranges most of the music, and will be performing one of her own Ladino compositions.

Last summer's concert at the National Gallery sponsored by the NAC and broadcast on CBC Radio was completely sold out, so be sure to call the Soloway Jewish Community Centre (798-9818 ext. 300) for tickets. Adults are $15; students/seniors are $12. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Hillel Academy student Zachary Resnick was the first to reach the finish line in the 2.2 km race (11-12-year-old category) at the 1999 Track and Field Tournament held at Terry Fox Park.

The event was one of 14 tournaments, in different sports, organized by the Ottawa Private Schools Athletic Association, in which Hillel Academy students participated this year.

UJA to hold workshop with Jonathan Miller on August 18

By Julie Stevens

'Negotiating the Increase' is the theme of the United Jewish Appeal's Team 2000 Workshop being led by Jonathan Miller, president and founder of Motivation Sales and Marketing Inc. on Wednesday, August 18.

A marketing and sales innovator, Miller is the developer of the AEID (Attention, Interest, Evaluation and Decision) method for solicitation that he has used personally to raise millions of dollars for clients all over the world. According to Miller, when a potential contributor says "No", this actually means "I need more information".

Raised and educated in England, Miller came to North America in his early twenties where he quickly became known as a successful and leading edge marketer.

Jonathan Miller

Among his many clients are brokerage houses, hospitals, universities and the major Jewish Federations of North America. His sense of theatrics, evident in his lively and entertaining workshops, comes from his years of performing in Canada's repertory theatre companies.

UJA is hosting two sessions at the Joseph and Rose Ages Family Building, 1780 Kerr Avenue. Seasoned canvassers, new volunteers and the general public are welcome to join Jonathan Miller at 11:30 am for lunch and train at the 12:00 pm session, or come for dinner at 5:30 pm and attend the 6:00 pm session. There will be a minimum charge to cover the catering costs. For more information, call the UJA office (798-4696 ext. 250 or 252).

Debbie Weinstein: profile of success

By Kinneret Globerman

The reception area of LaBarge Weinstein on the 11th floor of the Xerox building on Rochester Street is expansive in size and impressive in decor: plush, pale rose-colored leather couches are placed in groupings on wall-to-wall carpeting. Muted track lighting illuminates the gigantic company logo displayed strategically on one wall. The place looks like one of those intimidating high-powered legal firms on Bay Street where you would expect to find blue-suited lawyers and harried receptionists. It's an office fit for any legal eagle.

This eirie belongs, in part, to Debbie Weinstein whose casual manner and dress belie an impressive business acumen and aggressiveness. Surprising you with her easy-going nature, this recent winner of the Ottawa Business Journal's "40 Under 40" award (the second time in almost as many years) is not what you would expect as someone who, at 39 years old, is a founding partner of one of the most "arrived" law firms to represent many of the major players of Ottawa's burgeoning high-tech industry. LaBarge Weinstein is only two years old and yet it has doubled its size and established an enviable practice. With clients such as JDS Fitel and DY 4 Systems, LaBarge Weinstein is known as a firm that delivers the goods and goes beyond just sealing the deal, offering support and business advice to high-tech companies no matter the size.

For partner Debbie Weinstein, success has always been a given. It hasn't meant an easy ride. It has meant combining determination with desire and hard work. Weinstein's mother used to tell her that a woman had to be independent, a woman had to think for herself, a woman had to be successful, and a woman couldn't rely on her husband for all of that. There was never any question, then, that Debbie was going to achieve and succeed.

Weinstein always knew she was going to be a lawyer; her father, in fact, used to call her "the hanging judge". This legal eagle almost failed an undergrad Humanities course at York University and yet went on to place third in the entire university the same year.

After leaving Osgoode Hall Law School, she got a job on Bay Street, working grueling long hours, six days a week. She was married then and both she and her chartered accountant husband, David, were exhausted from the daily grind. He was offered work with his father in Ottawa and so the couple decided it was an opportunity for them both to leave the frantic pace of Toronto life.

It was 1987 and Weinstein got a job with Lang, Michener, Laurence and Shaw, moving over to Blake, Cassels, and Graydon in 1991. She moved up to partner; in 1995, to managing partner of the Ottawa office.

She carved out a professional niche for herself as a corporate and securities lawyer, working with the new high-tech companies that were springing up in Ottawa in the mid to late '80s, companies such as Mitel, Corel, Newbridge and DY 4, forging relationships that have lasted a decade and seen her initial contacts who started out as comptrollers and junior officers reach their own milestones, becoming CEOs and presidents. And through all of the hard times and the exciting times, she has always maintained a positive perspective. "I have no challenges," she says matter-of-factly.

"Every day I have an opportunity to fix something."

With LaBarge Weinstein, she has taken companies public, helped form strategic alliances, worked through share and asset divestitures and securities transactions, and given advice in regular business and technology-related transactions and issues. The company's clients total about 200. It represented Kanata-based Lumonics Inc., a laser manufacturer, in a $135-million merger with General Scanning Inc. of Boston; CIBC Wood Gundy when $187.8-million of JDS Fitel common shares were sold by the Japan-based Furukawa Electric Co. Ltd.; and Kingston-based Andyne Computing Ltd. a couple of years back when the business intelligence software-making firm was bought by Hummingbird Communications Ltd. of Toronto for $65 million.

"Our goal is not to build a large law firm," Weinstein says of her company. "We have no aspirations to be known as within the top two firms as far as numbers [go].

"We are very very focussed on the high-tech industry and we're focussed in certain areas of law in it and we will not change that; this is not a question of quantity, it's a question of quality. And we can do this as long as we continually focus on our priorities and the factors that have been successful for us: service to our clients, agility, flexibility, timeliness, team work, and practical advice."

Everything Weinstein has become today has been the result of the people who tried to pull her down but instead, inspired her to do better. What has sustained her throughout her career were her

OMJS honors its graduates

By Susan Lightstone

A lively crowd of parents, grandparents and siblings gathered to celebrate the graduation of 11 Ottawa Modern Jewish School students. The annual OMJS Graduation and Award Ceremony, hosted by the school's principal, Charna Mittelman, was held on June 13.

Adam Bentley, Michael Garfinkle, Michael Jacuk, Brenda Levitan, Steven Resnick, Susanna Rothschild, Sarah Rotstein, Jesse Segal-Daly, Daniel Shapero, Jacob Sigler and Tamara Vardomskaya were presented with Grade 7 diplomas by OMJS President, Dr. Ely Garfinkle. Michael Garfinkle and Tamara Vardomskaya delivered the valedictory address — in Hebrew, Yiddish and English — thanking their teachers and recounting stories from their early days at the school. Michael and Tamara were the joint winners of the Andy Andras Award. Sponsored by Rhoda and the late Syd Abbey, this award is presented for excellence in all subjects.

Both Mittelman and Garfinkle spoke warmly about the school's family atmosphere and stressed the strong academic achievements of OMJS students. Andrei Klapholz presented the Andrei and Nicole Klapholz Awards for best overall students to: Miriam Nightingale, Grade 1; Ben Jacuk, Grade 2; Liza Kobrinsky, Grade 3; Joanna Gotfrit, Grade 4; Charles Garfinkle, Grade 5; Soleil Adler, Grade 6.

The Kurt Orlik Award for most improved student was presented by Orlik's daughter, Julie Fine to: Ben Segal-Daly, Grade 1; Judith Marshall, Grade 2; Samara Garfinkle, Grade 3; Carly Jacuk, Grade 4; Eli Goldman Smith, Grade 5; Gary Fine, Grade 6; Daniel Shapero, Grade 7. Citizenship awards for students who have shown a positive attitude to learning were presented to: Haley Rivier-Gatt and Dara Rosove, the OMJS Award for Grade 1; Morgan Kerr and Maxi Cifarelli, the Mendelsohn-Gordon Award for Grade 2; Samara Garfinkle and Tobin Kaiman, the Ephram Gerber Award for Grade 3; Elana Nightingale and Artie Cifarelli, the Gordon and Freida Lauterman Award for Grade 4; Glen Torontow, the Esther Dobrow-Solman Award for Grade 5; Nicola Lightstone, the Louis and Miriam Goldstein Award for Grade 6; Sarah Rotstein, the Stan and Libby Glube Award for Grade 7.

Kevin Barwin, the son of Dr. Norman Barwin, presented the Norman Barwin Award for best research project on a Jewish personality or event of historical significance to Michael Garfinkle for a paper on his paternal grandmother and her exploits during the Second World War. Susanna Rothschild was awarded the Phil Cohen Award for Judaic Studies. Thirty-two students received Gerry Cammy Awards for excellence in individual subjects.

Vaad do you want to know?

Though summer is notoriously a quiet time at the Vaad, this year has been an exception to the rule.

CDC

In the continuing expansion of the Jewish Community Campus, the Early Beginnings Multicultural Daycare has vacated its premises at 831 Broadview Avenue and relocated to beautifully renovated space on the ground floor at 1774 Kerr Avenue.

Construction on the new Bess and Moe Greenberg Family Hillel Lodge in the Joseph and Inez Zelikovitz Long Term Care Centre will begin shortly. Bids to tender for contractors and sub-contractors have been posted, with construction due to begin late August and completion by September 2000.

OVH

A new director of Kashrut has been appointed following the recommendations of the restructuring committee chaired by Dr. Bernard Dolansky. Rabbi Mitchell Cohen of London Ontario will take up the position effective August 2, 1999. Rabbi Cohen brings with him a wealth of experience in Kashrut and hopes to institute a new three-year plan to promote Kashrut in the Ottawa community.

Pelican Fishery at 1500 Bank Street has been granted a licence under the supervision of the OVH. Fresh cut fish is available at the location every Tuesday.

The Westin Hotel has completed a series of successful Sunday evening dinners. After a summer hiatus, the dinners will resume in the fall after the Yom Tovim.

In its continuing attempt to service the local Jewish community, Loblaw's Pinecrest is supplying the meat to Camp B'nai Brith in Quyon. The camp continues to be under the supervision of the Ottawa Vaad HaKashrut, with mashgichim acting on a rotating basis.

CRC

In a most successful effort to protest the unjust arrest of 13 Iranian Jews, more than 150 people congregated Sunday June 27 in front of the Iranian Embassy at the corner of Metcalfe and MacLaren Streets. A joint initiative of the Jewish Community Council of Ottawa/Vaad Ha'Ir, Canadian Jewish Congress, B'nai Brith Canada and local synagogues, the rally began first in prayer and was followed by a protest, with several speakers including David Pratt MP representing the government of Canada.

Seen in the crowd was Ruth Berger, former chair and initiator of the Group of 35. Twenty some odd years ago, Ruth led protests on Parliament Hill to free Jews being held captive in the former Soviet Union, among them, Natan Scharansky.

When called upon, the Ottawa Jewish community has demonstrated its solidarity and support to uphold freedom for all.

Anyone interested in participating in a political action group is asked to call Stacia Benovitch, associate director of Community Relations (798-4696 ext. 234).

ARCHIVES

Dawn Logan, head archivist, is continually looking to augment the community's collection of memorabilia. If you have items of historical interest that you would eventually like to see find a permanent home that can be enjoyed by all, consider adding a codicil to your will, bequeathing these valuable gems to the Ottawa Jewish Archives. To have a discussion on this issue, you can reach Dawn Logan at 798-4696 extension 260.

Abe Feinstein wins prestigious award

By Paula Smith

Ottawa lawyer, Abe Feinstein, has been honored by his peers in a heartfelt and moving presentation. The Carleton County Law Association (CCLA) named Feinstein as the 1999 recipient of the Carleton Medal in an award ceremony at the Congress Centre with 250 on hand to salute him.

This award is presented by the CCLA to recognize great diligence, high ideals and outstanding leadership in the practice of law. Furthermore, the award is restricted to those who have made a significant contribution to the profession of law in the eyes of the awards jury. Feinstein has practiced law as a commercial real estate specialist with the firm of Soloway Wright since 1965. He has been elected as a Bencher of the Law Society of Upper Canada repeatedly.

In the community at large, Feinstein has taken a strong leadership role with the YMCA-YWCA of Ottawa-Carleton, holding many executive positions in that organization over the years. He has also been an active volunteer with the Centretown Citizens for Non-Profit Housing Co-op, the Carleton County Law Association, the Jewish Community Foundation and Beth Shalom Synagogue.

In his acceptance speech Feinstein paid a special tribute to his father, Benjamin Feinstein, for his courage in coming to Canada in order to offer his children a better life. He said, "Dad, did you ever dream you would be here tonight when you were a young man in Czarist Russia and your village was constantly under attack in the pogroms? Did you ever dream you would be here tonight when you were captured by the Bolsheviks and imprisoned after the Russian Revolution for trying to leave Russia? Yes, you did dream. And your dream has come true!"

Feinstein also expressed his appreciation to his law partners for all their encouragement and support and to his loyal and dedicated support staff who assisted him so ably throughout his years of practice.

Abe celebrated this award with his wife of over 30 years, Beverly, and his three daughters Susan, Harriet and Shawna, all currently living in Toronto.

Ottawa Jewish Archives restores historically significant photographs

By Dawn Logan

The photograph entitled "Anthony Eden meets some of our boys" was recently restored by the Ottawa Jewish Archives. It is an image which resonates on several levels.

For the person who donated this Second World War photograph, Fay Shulman, it brings back vivid memories of meeting her husband, Joseph Shulman at her home in Cricklewood, London. Her parents had put up a notice in Canada House, the location of this photograph, for Jewish boys to join the Moss family for Rosh Hashanah. "It was love at first sight" when Joseph Shulman walked through the door of Fay Moss's home. Fay and Joseph married in London in 1942. David Doctor, also in the photograph as well as serving with Joseph in the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, attended their wedding.

On December 14, 1944, Fay joined 250 other war brides at the "secret port" of Liverpool where they boarded the Mauritania. Destroyers safely escorted the ship to Halifax and Pier 21.

"Arriving at the Ottawa railway station in the dead of winter with only a fall coat" has never been forgotten," says Fay. The snow, extreme cold and brilliant lights were all new sensations for a war bride.

The photograph also captures a relaxed moment during the long, tense years of the Second World War. It was taken in 1941 on the steps of Canada House, London when the Right Honourable Anthony Eden, secretary of state for foreign affairs, was chatting with three Jewish servicemen from Ottawa and one from Toronto. The Canadian Jewish Congress used this image in a small pamphlet to promote the purchase of Canadian War Saving Certificates.

The Ottawa Jewish Archives rarely has an opportunity to restore such a unique and historically significant photograph. The original, creased and marked, was restored by an artist who specializes in photo restoration and works in conjunction with a photographer. The work was made possible through a bequest to the Ottawa Jewish Historical Society from the Ann Fleisher Estate.

The Ottawa Jewish Archives wants to share this restored photograph on a personal level with Fay Shulman, on the wartime level with Ottawa Jewish veterans and on a professional level with everyone interested in saving damaged photographs.

Anthony Eden meets some of our boys: Mannie Hoffman of Toronto, David Doctor, Joseph Shulman and Benny Azmier of Ottawa, talk things over.

Community mourns Lorry Greenberg

warm, affectionate. When I was with him I felt both safe and adventurous, like nothing could harm me. He taught me the importance of family, of sense of place, how to love people, how to live.

At the centre of this education was a belief, as strong as could exist, in the sanctity of the family. At the centre of this sense of family was 1970 Lenester, the nerve-centre of our family, a big stone house as powerful a metaphor as anything else.

To put into words the importance of that house to me is near impossible: a treasure chest, a warm blanket, a playground, a big smile ...

I would stay there as often as I could, feigning religious conviction - as in my fervent desire to observe Passover - if the situation was called for. All to spend time with Uncle Lorry and Aunt Carol, Heather and Steffi. The big bed and Bailey (editor's note: the dog), Uncle Lor in two-piece pyjamas, a bowl of radishes in hand, a game of Scrabble on the bed, twin alarm clocks (and he would still ask Aunt Carol the time), Larry King Live on TV. And he would talk. And he would tease. And he would smile that mischievous, proud smile, look that glowing, radiant look. And I felt great.

Friday night dinners as dependable as tradition itself, the cornerstone of my family's deep feeling of togetherness. Everyone had a place at Aunt Carol and Uncle Lorry's table. With Uncle Lorry presiding, laughing, crying, boisterously recounting, family and friends couldn't help but be taken in by the incredible warmth of this man.

About a decade ago, Uncle Lorry's sense of adventure as well as his flare for culinary misadventure, his thirst for life, his open-armed way of pulling the family close to his heart came together in the Annual Lorry Greenberg Fishing Derby. Six months of preparation, of booklet-sized invitations, of long-listed delegation, of frenetic organization resulted in what became for all of us cousins, the best weekend of the year.

As much as he taught me about life, Uncle Lorry hadn't a finger in my apprenticeship as a fisherman. Because Uncle Lorry rarely caught fish. How he ever won the trophy bearing his name is a miracle of cosmic proportions.

Instead of fishing, he was talking, laughing, and kibbitzing. He was cooking and organizing, teasing and fretting.

I'll never forget that morning a few years back, the first year the trip went without him. I met Aunt Carol in the kitchen, and she told me he was upstairs. He wasn't feeling well, was really tired. I crept into the bedroom and put my hand on his shoulder. He opened his eyes with the tenderest of smiles and without missing a beat launched into a recipe for French toast. A litany of foodstuffs and commercial establishments where they could be acquired. That was the annual wrinkle in the menu that he had planned on introducing.

In the last couple of years, Beef Bourignon and Spanish omelets have given way to hamburgers, hamburgers and more hamburgers.

And we miss him so much.

We miss the laughter, so true, so pure, that it would take you into its arms and give you a hug. We miss the tenderness, the infinite intensity of feeling.

Was it a paradox, that heart of my uncle, both so strong and so weak? No heart is as whole as a broken one, writes Elie Wiesel. No heart was as big as this man's, my hero, my uncle, the man who taught me how to belong to a family.

Marion Mayman determined to increase awareness of JNF

Marion Mayman is an organization's dream. She's committed, she's energetic. When she sets out to get things done, they get done. "When I sit on a committee I like to work, not just sit there," she says. Happily for JNF Ottawa, Marion will sit as chair of the Ottawa organization over the next two years.

Marion Mayman

"I'm following in some pretty spectacular footsteps," says Marion. "(Immediate Past Chair) Norman Barwin devoted a tremendous amount of time to JNF Ottawa that paid off in countless positive ways.

"In fact," she says, "JNF Ottawa has been very lucky over the years to have had wonderful leaders who gave their all to the organization. The vitality JNF Ottawa is experiencing today is a result of a long line of dedicated people who stood up to be counted, made good decisions and cared immensely about the vital work done by JNF in and for Israel."

The new Ottawa chair wants to see JNF become more than just a household name. "I'd like people to remember JNF when they're making a donation," she says. "The JNF Blue Box and planting trees are very important. But I also want to educate the community about the larger work JNF does in the areas of reforestation, environment, the greening of the desert and water shortage."

Marion plans to continue the fine example set by past leaders of the organization. "The fact that so many past presidents and officers stay involved in JNF Ottawa says something very positive about this organization," she says. "Each of them will play an important role working with new committee chairs to show them the ropes."

The new chair plans to assign a specific role to each board member. "That way each person feels he or she is really contributing and that's the secret of success," says Marion. "My motto is: The JNF Board is a team effort. A good team with everyone pulling their weight makes for good results."

Ottawa bids fond l'hita'rat to Shaliach Ron Krumer

JNFers and friends gathered for a brunch at the home of Norman and Myrna Barwin on Sunday, July 11 to bid a fond farewell to departing JNF Shaliach Lt. Col. Ron Krumer and his family. His term in Canada completed, Ron is returning to Israel carrying the good wishes of all who knew him.

Eight new inscriptions added to the JNF Sefer Bar/Bat Mitzvah

Mazal Tov and Yasher Koach to Joel Baskin, Aviva Cohen (Dieppe, New Brunswick), Philip Jacobson, Naomi Perley, Stephanie Ramsay, Andrea Silver, Jesse Starosta and Shira Taylor, who were called to the Torah as B'nai Mitzvah recently. The families of each chose to add a meaningful dimension to the milestone in their young lives by inscribing the name of the celebrant in the Sefer Bar/Bat Mitzvah. The book, in which the names of B'nai Mitzvah from every corner of the Diaspora are inscribed, is maintained in a place of honor in the Keren Kayemeth L'Israel offices in Jerusalem.

On a daily basis you can plant trees for all occasions. An attractive card is sent to the recipient. To order, call the JNF office (798-2411).

Ottawa Jewish Historical Society on completion of campaign

The community's response to the needs of the Ottawa Jewish Historical Society has been most encouraging.

The 1998 campaign results have surpassed by $3,000 the preliminary target of $150,000. To date, the society has spent $31,361 to meet its priority needs for the Archives such as furnishings, scanning equipment and operating costs. It has already begun to scan the Ottawa Jewish Bulletin.

As approved by the Multiple Appeals Committee, the second phase of the campaign to raise an additional $37,000 has commenced. Community members who were not previously canvassed are asked to make a commitment.

At least one-third of the campaign receipts will be used to store, on a permanent basis, Archives records in a scanned format to permit ready access on computer monitors. In this way, the data will be easily available to the public.

Baron Byng class celebrates 60th anniversary of graduation

By Charles Enman

Not every high school reunion sees its congregants singing the "Soldier's Chorus" from Verdi's "Faust."

Not every reunion is treated to a folk-tale told in Yiddish.

Above all, not every high school class manages to celebrate the 60th anniversary of graduation.

But then, the 1939 class of Baron Byng High School in Montreal was no ordinary class.

Some 40-odd former classmates met on June 20 at the country estate of Saul Goldfarb in Treadwell, 50 km east of Ottawa.

"I knew everyone here at the beginning of my life," an emotional Goldfarb told his guests. "Some of you are a little difficult to recognize after so many years, but seeing you again is a beautiful thing."

His audience must have thought so, too. Two had come from California, one had flown in from Israel, and a smattering had come from points around Ontario. (Most, however, had come by bus from Montreal.)

The class philosopher, Sam Levy of Montreal, said the Class of '39 was "perhaps the most successful in the remarkable history of Baron Byng."

Some 80 per cent of the boys served in the Second World War, which broke out only three months after graduation.

Thanks to Veterans' Rehabilitation Benefits, most attended university after the war and became successful professionals - dentists, physicians, lawyers, architects, and engineers.

Many strikes were against them, said reunion committee head Edward Wolkove of Montreal. Baron Byng was in the heart of the city's Jewish neighborhood, and 98 per cent of the students were Jewish, most of them children of impoverished European immigrants.

"For simple financial reasons, very few of us were going to be able to go on to university," Wolkove said. "The rehabilitation benefits made all the difference."

Jews faced other barriers, as well. A Jew who hoped to enter McGill University needed an average of 75 per cent, while his gentile friends found the doors opening with an average of only 65 per cent.

"Everything told us we had to be good - and I think most of us really learned that lesson," Wolkove said.

Other classes must have learned that lesson, too. Baron Byng counts among its other alumnae such illustrious figures as David Lewis, the late leader of the federal NDP; actor William Shatner of "Star Trek" fame; poet Irving Layton; sociologist Lionel Tiger; and actress Marilyn Lightstone.

There were reminiscences of many teachers at Baron Byng - and especially of two, both now long dead.

No one remembers the given names of D.M. Herbert but everyone remembers his gifts as a choir leader.

"He was a Welshman who could make the most ordinary voice sound fine, and the love of music he instilled has never left most of us," recalled Ruth Reisler Feigelson.

Music was a compulsory course and Mr. Herbert had all students aboard as he concentrated on the two annual choral concerts, at Christmas and at the end of the school year.

Anne Sullivan was the fondly remembered art teacher, a respected artist herself who worked with the Group of Seven. "Her infectious enthusiasm simply caught us up in the love of art," Feigelson said.

Carl Worebrand, a retired engineer now living in Newport Beach, California, moved to the United States 51 years ago to escape the anti-Semitism of the Montreal of the day. He had never been back for any of the seven earlier reunions and hadn't seen most of his former classmates since graduation.

"You have to be grateful to Baron Byng," Worebrand said. "In the States, I was always struck by how much better educated I was than most of my American colleagues. Few of them could write coherently, but teachers at Baron Byng expected everyone to develop a real command of the English language - and most of us did."

Thirty-five of the original 149 classmates have died - nine of them since the last reunion, five years ago, at the Goldfarbs'.

The grads observed 30 seconds of silence in memory of the 35, and Goldfarb, yarmulke atop his head, recited Kaddish.

If solemnity got its due, the reunion was joyous nonetheless - "a celebration," Levy said, "of the wonderful spirit of comradeship that we always shared."

In recent years, reunions have been held every five years. But with everyone approaching 80, an interval of two years now seems wiser, Wolkove said.

That reunion will likely take place in a Montreal restaurant. But Saul and Edna Goldfarb invited everyone back to their Treadwell estate for the 65th anniversary, in 2004.

"Who knows? I and a few others may be gone by then," said Feigelson. "But we've kept an unusual interest in each others' lives, and I think many will be back."

Ganon's growing greatly and greatly growing

No matter how successful our Ganon preschool program continues to be, it appears that they will never stop striving to be better. This past year the program was a runaway success with what seemed like throngs of children enjoying the SJCC. Even though Joy Levine will not be with us next year in an official capacity, she will be around for the transition period during the fall as the very capable Brenda Siefried will be the Ganon pre-school director starting in September. Her ideas and energies will also be with us, as she was involved in many of our changes and new programs for next year.

One of our most noticeable changes will be our conquest of another room at the SJCC. In the fall you will see the building bustling with almost 80 kids per week. Another change you are sure to appreciate for the 1999/2000 term is our new lecture series for parents, topics that may include positive behaviour management, building self-esteem in your child, and sexuality. In our continuing attempts to meet the needs of both child and parents we are sure our Going Bye - Bye respite care program will be very useful to families in the area. The program offers families the opportunity to drop the kids off so their parents can enjoy some time alone, either at the SJCC or off campus.

Joy Levine

Our Ganon program has established an outstanding reputation as the premier preschool in the Ottawa Carleton area for Jewish families. To ensure ongoing growth, success and a well-rounded education for our children, we have added several highly trained and experienced new staff, they include Cantor Daniel Benlolo, Daniel Lang, Ann-Lynn Rapoport, and Aero Selfridge.

Our out of the world growth is going to continue next year with out of the world programs, as visits with Aliens, Cavepeople, and hikes through an Enchanted Forest turn from X-files fantasy into real life! Other fun activities include gym days with Cheryl Youliden, and Wild Music with Nancy Lockwood.

We will also be welcoming back Morah Jenny in the fall as she continues to lead parents and children in the very successful Shabbat Shalom drop in program. Jenny's bubbly personality is sure to help you look forward to Shabbat.

Your management team of Brenda and Joy is working closely together to ensure that everything you have come to love about our philosophy and approach will continue for 1999/2000. For more details please contact Joy or Brenda at 798-9818 ext. 280.

Basketball Camp promises to be a slam dunk

The SJCC proudly introduces its fourth annual Maccabi Basketball Camp complete with legendary coaches and awesome players to teach, train and entertain boys and girls from the ages of 9 to 16 in the art and science of basketball, from August 23rd to 27th.

A team needs as great a coach as possible and, at our camp, the most impressive collection of college coaches and players this area has ever seen will be assembled to inspire and train legions of future stars.

The SJCC is very proud to announce that legendary coach Jack Donohue will be a special guest during our Basketball Camp. Coach Donohue is the former head coach of Canada's Olympic and National Basketball Team. Two of his former players are in the NBA today, and he coached Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in high school.

Former University of Ottawa coach, and allstar player, Rod Lee, will be returning to the capital and the SJCC to share his knowledge and passion for the game from the University of Texas Pan American where he now coaches.

Also returning to Ottawa is Brian Lee. Brian is at St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, Nova Scotia, where he now coaches after leading Xavier to a CIAU National championship back in 1993. While attending Sir Robert Borden High School in Ottawa, Brian was the most highly recruited point guard to come out of the city. Brian also taught hundreds of kids at the JCC the game of basketball and coached our Maccabi Youth basketball team in 1990, 1992 and 1994, which travelled to the Detroit, Baltimore and Cleveland games. Besides being gifted athletically, Brian will make a great teacher having just completed his masters degree in education.

SPEAKING VOLUMES

SUMMER... at the Greenberg Families Library

New for you...

The library continues to receive many new books. Listed below are only a few of our recent acquisitions.

For the Relief of Unbearable Urges.

This debut collection of nine stories explores the condition of being Jewish. Nathan Englander examines the collision of Jewish tradition with secular realities. A deeply affecting treatise on the caprices of fate and the inevitability of laughter.

Entering the High Holy Days:

A Guide to the Origins, Themes and Prayers. The High Holy Days-Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur-are for many Jews the highlight of the Jewish year. Rabbi Reuven Hammer provides historical background and an interpretation of the ideas, practices, and liturgy that lend contemporary relevance to today's Jews.

Ancient Israel: Its life and Institutions.

This fascinating reconstruction of the social and religious life of Israel during the biblical period, by Roland de Vaux, is considered by many to be a modern classic.

Katerina: A Novel.

Both beautiful and grim, Aharon Appelfeld draws the reader into a world that seems utterly real.

Carlos "Bobby" Brown has been working with kids at the SJCC for over five years. All the children that he has worked with both at our Sports Camp and afterschool basketball clinics adore Bobby. A former allstar at the University of Ottawa and currently the men's varsity team assistant coach, Bobby also spends his time at Darcy McGee High School where he teaches science.

Jon Adly is the starting guard at Carleton University. Jon is a legendary figure at the SJCC as he has been a fixture at Sports Camp for four years. Jon has a special way of teaching sports in a fun and positive way. Making sure that kids have a fun time and learn new skills are two of the components Jon brings to the team.

Clarence Porter also coaches at Ottawa U. While there Clarence was a dominant allstar. At six feet six inches, Clarence's specialty is teaching kids how to use their bodies effectively. He will be working his third Maccabi Basketball camp. His big heart and love for kids makes Clarence a true asset to the camp.

Pat Kieran just completed his freshmen year at McGill University in Montreal. A smooth-shooting forward, Pat was a city allstar while attending Ridgemont High School. Pat has a tremendous future at McGill where he shines both on the court and in the classroom.

There you have it, the best staff for a memorable week. If you want to learn the game from our allstar coaches, then hook up fast, because there are a limited number of spaces and they are filling up quickly. For more information about the Soloway JCC Maccabi Ottawa Basketball Camp, give Camp Director Jon Braun a call at 798 9818 ext. 267 or just come down to the SJCC to register your child.

Spotlight on Saper

Art Saper credits his transition from couch potato to exercise guru both to the encouragement of his family and the helpful support of the SJCC fitness centre staff. Art has been using the SJCC facilities 6 days a week in his recent loss of 36 pounds. In doing so Art has become a loyal member of the famed SOBs (six o'clock bunch) who gather every morning from Sunday to Friday at the Soloway gym in rain, snow, sleet, and sun. The new slim Saper appreciates the camaraderie and shlick that goes on first thing in the morning, and cannot believe that there are not more people who join them.

Art Saper

Art's involvement in the SJCC fitness centre began when he first came to the open house held last year. At the time he realized that his wife (Marsha) and kids (Mike and Jon) have been exercising their whole lives, and perhaps it was time to move on from the 'strenuous' activity of remote control thumb-races to working out his whole body. Once he started at the SJCC he came to appreciate the helpful, courteous, support and encouragement from Gennady, Linda, Raul and the entire SJCC fitness centre staff. Art started at the SJCC from day one and now believes that people who aren't taking advantage of this facility don't know what they are missing. He describes the facility as comfortable and friendly, and the benefits as improved health, feeling better, and comradeship are worth more than the price of a membership. Truly for Art Saper and his family the SJCC has become the centre of their lives.

Update on SJCC Summer Camp

SJCC Summer camp is under way and we are having a blast. We have already conquered the heat and humidity and now can take advantage of the cooler temperatures. Pool parties, oneg Shabbatots, and barbeque lunches are just some of the highlights of the first weeks of camp. The sound of singing and laughter is always around us. It is such a welcome sight to see so many children returning to the camp from last summer and we have so many new faces who are now just as familiar to us. There are still some spots available. Please contact the SJCC office at 798-9818 for more information or the SJCC camp office at 722-9235.

JUST SO YOU KNOW

The SJCC runs a lost and found. Articles are kept at the fitness control desk and are displayed at various points throughout the year. Unclaimed items are donated to various Jewish charities.

Early Beginnings gets a fresh start

The dust is still settling at 1774 Broadview (right on campus!) as Early Beginnings is still exploring their new surroundings. At the end of June, the daycare moved from their old haunts at 831 Broadview to the new building in an exhausting 16 hour move. The new building can accommodate 42 kids and is fully equipped with the best toys, furniture, and napping equipment. It's enough to make any adult want to sign up for Early Beginnings.

It's clear that with this new facility Early Beginnings will be providing a great beginning for our community's kids, and the entire community thanks Marie Stovicek and her team for the caring and commitment that goes into running such a successful daycare. Yasher Koach and best of luck in the building.

Pure pool pleasure

Summer is here and life just keeps getting better and better at the SJCC.
With the opening of our new outdoor pool the SJCC now offers more ways to relax than Club Med. After all, what could be more relaxing than sitting by our newly renovated huge, outdoor pool with the sunshine beating down, enjoying the cool refreshment of your favorite beverage and a barbecued snack provided by the Noshery.

In fact, not only has the pool had a facelift, but so has the surrounding area. We now have many patio chairs and tables alongside the pool and will soon be completing our six room outdoor change area. To match the new equipment outside the pool, we have new equipment for use inside the pool. Every summer day hundreds of kids use the life jackets, water noodles and flutterboards as

ORGANIZATIONS AND PEOPLE

The Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation begins its 25th anniversary year celebration

The 25th Annual General Meeting of the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation took place on June 22. It was an occasion to both reflect on the past and state bold new plans for the future.

These new plans were proclaimed by Norm Lesh who accepted the presidency of the Foundation "with high hopes." He then proceeded to outline an ambitious plan for a year-long celebration with the goal of dramatically increasing the Foundation's funds.

He noted that, at the beginning of its 25th year, the Foundation has an impressive total of almost eight million dollars in funds and 10.5 million dollars in deferred gifts. "Wouldn't it be wonderful," he mused, "if, in its 25th year, the Foundation total could grow to 25 million dollars. Let's make that our goal!" he exclaimed to sustained applause.

Norm Lesh and Foundation treasurer Lynda Greenberg will co-chair the Foundation's 25th Anniversary Celebration Committee.

"The excitement is already building," Lesh observed. One of the thrusts of the campaign is to encourage the "topping up" of current funds or the establishment of new funds in multiples of 25.

Abe Carlofsky has set the pace by topping up the Carlofsky Family Educational Fund by $25,000. Sue and Sam Slack and Selma Tarantour opened funds this year in multiples of 25.

Lesh also mentioned the Talmud Torah board's participation in the Foundation's celebration. In looking for a way to honor retiring principal Doris Bronstein, the board tied its tribute to the Foundation's anniversary year, and raised over $14,000 for the renamed Doris Bronstein Talmud Torah Afternoon School Fund. (Please see page 18 for details.)

Lesh concluded his address by urging the entire community to get in on the celebration. "A community needs a strong Foundation and a strong Foundation needs the support of the entire community."

Retiring president Rose Taylor graciously honored the OJCF's founders, "people of vision and determination who planted the seeds that have grown into this important organization." She thanked the Foundation's recently retired executive director, Orly Aaron, for her hard work and commitment and lauded new executive director Gordon Roston for effecting a smooth transition.

Taylor reported that the past year had been one of steady growth. As of December 31, 1998, the Foundation had a total of 425 funds with a value of $7, 910,

970, up from 415 funds with a capital of $7,630, 032 at the end of 1997. Allocations to various charities totaled $561,065. The Foundation also holds $10, 574,078 in deferred gifts. (For your copy of the Foundation's annual report, call Gordon Roston at 798-4696, ext 272.)

Incoming vice-president, Saul Goldfarb, thanked Rose Taylor for her years of devotion to the Foundation and presented her with a gift of a shofar and a bouquet of flowers.

The new board of officers for the 1999-2000 term are: Immediate Past President Rose Taylor; President, Norm Lesh; Vice-President, Saul Goldfarb; Treasurer Lynda Greenberg, Secretary Joseph Lief.

The following individuals were elected to the board of directors for a three year term: Ruth Berger, Laura Greenberg, Avraham Iny, Ron Levitan, and John Tavel. Current members are: Dan Greenberg, A. J. Freiman, Naomi Lipsky Cracower, Edie Landau, Allan Taylor, Gregory Sanders and Robert Wener.

The 10 new funds established between April 1998 and June 1999 were: the Jeff Taylor and Susan Weisman Endowment Fund, the Haze Wainberg Fund, the Jennie and Isadore L. Arron Memorial Fund, the Laura and Gordon Spiegel Fund, the Shirley and Shier Berman Fund for Ottawa Jewish Archives, the Commvesco Levinson-Viner Fund, the Sam and Sue Slack Endowment Fund, the Ernst and Helen Kummermann Memorial Fund, the Shalom Perel Memorial Fund, the Tarantour Family Fund and the Doris Bronstein Talmud Torah Afternoon School Fund.

"We hope that our 25th anniversary celebration will encourage many more people to think about opening a Foundation fund," explained President Norm Lesh. A gift to the Foundation is your link to the future. All capital in the funds is held in perpetuity and only the interest is allocated to the charity of your choice. Creative tailor-made giving strategies such as insurance programs and charitable trusts can offer tax and estate planning benefits while helping you fulfil the mitzvah of tzedakah.

To find out how you can be part of the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation's 25th anniversary celebration, call Gordon Roston (798-4696, ext 272).

Fleeing Ethiopia: Two indomitable spirits overcome prejudice to reach Jerusalem

KID LIT

DEANNA SILVERMAN

Operation Moses, Operation Joshua, Operation Sheba and Operation Solomon are the best known of the secret airlifts that brought thousands of Ethiopian Jews to Israel between 1984 and 1991.

In Ethiopia, they were called Falashas, a name that means 'stranger' and implies their low status as outsiders. They preferred the name Beta-Israel, House of Israel. They practised a Torah-based, non-Talmudic type of Judaism thought to have been heavily influenced by Ethiopic Christians.

After they reached Israel, many Ethiopian Jews told hair-raising stories of their treks across mountains, deserts and parched grasslands to refugee camps in the Sudan and the filthy, disease-ridden conditions in those camps. Such stories were the inspiration for the following poignant and compelling novel.

The Storyteller's Beads

By Jane Kurtz
Gulliver Books
Harcourt Brace & Company 1998
154 pp Ages 8-12

There are many reasons to describe The Storyteller's Beads as a remarkable first novel. More than the sum of its action and themes (separations, dangerous journey, prejudice, interdependence, survival), its appeal to the senses and effective use of music and bible stories add resonances that make the book impossible to put down.

The Storyteller's Beads transports readers to another world, yet by focusing on universal concerns makes that world familiar. Although its protagonists are challenged by extreme conditions, the inner strengths that enable them to grow and triumph are, hopefully, available to kids of all cultures and all times.

The story is set in Ethiopia in the mid-1980s. It is a time of massive unrest and hardship. Government soldiers roam the countryside seizing men and boys for front line duty against rebels in Ethiopia's northern province of Eritrea. Murderous bandits are running wild and a severe drought is causing massive famine.

Against this chaotic historical background and the rugged majesty of Ethiopia's topography, Jane Kurtz tells the story of two courageous girls, Sahay of the Kemant people and Rahel, a blind Beta-Israel girl. For very different reasons, each is reluctantly fleeing Ethiopia.

Although the Kemant people and the Beta-Israel are thought to have descended from the same ethnic group in the distant past, over the centuries each has become a distinctive entity. Their blind prejudice of one another is deeply ingrained and extensive, including notions of buda, the evil eye, and transfiguration.

Sahay and her uncle are running away from murderous strangers. Survival is all. They have no sense of destination. By contrast, Rahel and her brother, Dawit, are running away from bad times, discrimination and Dawit's possible conscription into the military. But they are also going toward something. They have a destination and a future purpose.

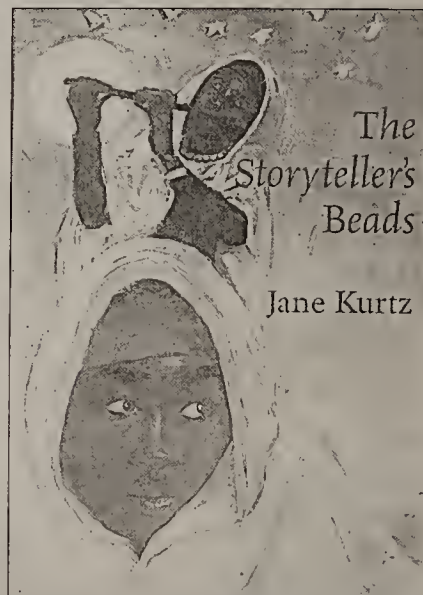

Inspired by the story of the Exodus and other biblical stories associated with the amber beads her grandmother gives her as a memory aide, Rahel and Dawit are trying to fulfill the Beta-Israel dream of aliyah, return to Jerusalem.

In telling her story of how these two girls come together and are ultimately forced to rely on each other for survival, Kurtz alternates perspectives. This technique enables readers to learn about Sahay and Rahel from the inside out, blending their inner and outer realities in ever deepening layers of awareness, insight and, finally, bonding.

Kurtz's sparse, hauntingly descriptive language - including the use of Amharic and Kemant words explained in the glossary - mirrors both the grimness of the physical challenges facing Sahay and Rahel and the vibrancy of their very different inner worlds.

Although Rahel was blinded by a mysterious illness, Sahay's and Rahel's family memories, their language and some beliefs are similar. However Rahel's wealth of comforting and uplifting stories contrasts sharply with Sahay's overwhelming turmoil concerning her "terrible day of running."

The story's conclusion, foreshadowed by several biblical tales especially that of Nahomey and Hirute (Naomi and Ruth), is human drama at its best. Drawn with depth and perception, Sahay's and Rahel's arduous ordeals and indomitable spirits are unforgettable. Be sure to put The Storyteller's Beads on a summer reading list today!

FROM SOUP TO NUTS

Heat the grill and your meal is done in minutes

SOUP TO NUTS

DONNA KARLIN

This time of year, I try to add as many recipes for the grill as I can. I love the taste of vegetables on the barbecue and am always experimenting with new ways of preparing them. Make the coleslaw a day ahead and marinate the chicken the night before for the best results. Then all you have to do is heat the grill and your meal is done in minutes!

Grilled Italian Eggplant

- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 tbsp olive oil
- 3 small Italian eggplants, 6 to 8 oz, halved lengthwise
- 1 tsp dried oregano
- 1 tsp dried basil
- 1 tsp sweet or hot paprika
- 1/2 tsp dried thyme
- 1/2 tsp hot pepper flakes, optional

Salt, freshly ground pepper to taste

Prepare grill and heat to high. Mix together garlic and oil in small bowl. Brush mixture over cut sides of eggplants. Combine oregano, basil, paprika, thyme, pepper flakes, salt and pepper in small bowl. Set aside.

Arrange eggplants cut side down on hot grate and grill until nicely browned, 3-4 minutes. Brush skin sides of eggplant with oil mixture. Turn with tongs and brush tops with remaining mixture. Sprinkle with herb mixture to taste.

Continue cooking cut sides up until flesh is soft, 6-8 minutes. Serve immediately. Serves 6.

Grilled Peanut-Garlic Chicken

- 6 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves
- 4 to 5 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 green onions, minced
- 3/4 inch piece ginger root, minced

- Juice of 1 1/2 limes
- 1/2 cup rice wine or white wine
- 1/2 cup creamy peanut butter

- 4 1/2 tbsp peanut oil
- 4 1/2 tbsp soy sauce
- 3 tbsp sesame oil
- 2 - 3 tsp brown sugar
- Freshly ground pepper
- Chopped cilantro

Place chicken breasts in heavy plastic bag. Set aside. Combine all remaining ingredients except cilantro in medium bowl and mix until smooth. Pour over chicken and seal bag. Marinate in refrigerator at least 2 hours or overnight.

Prepare grill for indirect cooking. Remove chicken from marinade. Grill chicken on oiled rack, turning once, until tender and no longer pink, about 15 minutes.

Sprinkle with chopped cilantro. Serves 6.

Creole Coleslaw

Dressing:

- 1/4 cup minced parsley
- 3/4 cup light mayonnaise
- 2 tbsp fresh lemon juice
- 1 tbsp sweet paprika
- 1 tbsp sugar
- 1 tbsp ketchup
- 2 tbsp plus 1 tsp spicy stone-ground mustard
- 1/8 tsp ground red pepper or to taste

Cole slaw:

- 3 medium carrots, shredded
- 1 medium head cabbage, about 2 lb, cored, thinly sliced
- 1 cup thinly sliced small green onions
- 1 cup diced celery

For dressing, process all ingredients until smooth in food processor fitted with metal blade. Leave in work bowl. For coleslaw, shred carrots and thinly slice cabbage in food processor. As necessary, transfer contents of work bowl to large bowl. Add green onions and celery to slaw. Toss well to mix. It will take a few minutes because dressing is thick. Transfer to serving bowl. Can be made a day ahead and refrigerated, covered airtight. Before using, stir and season to taste. Serves 6.

Vignettes - The Good Speech

About the author: Morris Silbert was born near Hamilton in 1912. At the age of 58 he went to McMaster University full time for a BA/BSW degree and worked as a social worker until his retirement. He currently lives at the Terrace, Baycrest Centre in Toronto.

Silbert has written a book of memoirs entitled Family History and Other Stories for his family. As they have such universal appeal, his daughter, Ruth Silbert, who lives in Ottawa, offered to share some of these stories with Bulletin readers.

They will appear in the Bulletin over the next few months. You might want to read these stories aloud to your children.

To a child everything new is exciting, especially such an event as took place on August 16, 1923. My oldest sister Fanny was getting married to Louis, who was to become my brother-in-law. For weeks our house was in an uproar, with all the preparations for the great event. My Aunt Ella had come all the way from Harrisburg, Pennsylvania to help mother. They cooked and they baked for days and made all the preparations for the big event. The house was scrubbed and everything put in good order. The lawn was mowed, every scrap of paper and every twig picked up, to make it neat and clean.

At last the big day arrived, clear and sunny, a good omen for the event. It was planned that, weather permitting, the wedding would take place outdoors, in the late afternoon. Most of the guests were from Hamilton and they began arriving at two o'clock and by four, they were all there. That's when things started happening.

The place chosen for the marriage to take place was on the lawn, facing the gate, which was flanked by two lilac bushes. Father's large prayer shawl substituted for the bridal canopy. It was held by four male poleholders. The groom arrived and positioned himself under the canopy. The bride arrived escorted by my parents. The bride walked seven times around the groom, before positioning herself beside him. Rabbi Levine then performed the ceremony, which ended with the breaking of the glass by the groom. Everyone shouted "Mazel Tov, Mazel Tov!" Wide-eyed, I watched and found it all very exciting.

The next stage of the event was the wedding dinner. The large kitchen-dining room was cleared of all furniture, and tables were set up in a U-shape to accommodate all the guests. The meal that was served was very special and did credit to the efforts of mother, Aunt Ella and sister Sarah.

When tea arrived, father arose, blessed the bride and groom and then he called on Rabbi Levine to say a few words. I learned then that Rabbi Levine was a man who loved to talk but didn't know when to stop talking. On and on he went in what seemed to me at the time, without end. When he at last sat down, father called on the groom. Now Louis to his dying day, when he got in front of a microphone was in his glory. He made a long flowery speech, about how he got to our farm and found this beautiful flower that he had just married. When he had, mercifully, finished, father called on J. L. Shekter to say a few words. I gasped! Father was going to call on all the men at that table.

While all this was happening, this 11-year-old was squirming on his hard kitchen chair. His seat was sore, he was bored to tears and saw no end in sight for this agony. To add to my discomfort, I faced the wall clock. The pendulum was mocking me on its journey back and forth.

When at long last Shekter sat down, Father called on Mr. Shnaible. Shnaible was not even a family friend. He was only there because he owned an automobile and agreed to drive some of our friends to the wedding. I had never seen him before nor have I since, but he became my hero that day. He got up and said, "I wish the bride and groom Mazel Tov and that's all," and sat down. The rest of the men at that table took his cue, and the dinner was quickly over. Seventy years have passed and I have yet to hear a speech that impressed me more!

grandparents and their stories which she carries with her daily. Their influence has been instrumental in steering her course. She attributes her drive and many of her own values to them. Her maternal grandmother was a Russian immigrant who was left as a single mother at a very early age. She never learned to read or write English and yet established her own candy store in the heart of Toronto, moving in with Debbie's family (after "kicking the nanny out") and walking miles to and from the store every day, even in inclement weather, year after year until she fractured a hip from an icy fall. Her paternal grandfather owned a gas station in Toronto.

Service and advice are themes she lives by. "I learned early to give good service, just like my grandmother, who used to say 'Give good service!' and just like my grandfather, give good service and you'll always keep your clients."

Obviously, those two themes have contributed to her success as a businesswoman. Yet she takes her Ottawa Business Journal award in stride.

"It's all the people around me who pick up the slack," she says with sincere modesty.

"It's all very good to be recognized but I think people have to realize that I'm really no different than any other human being. My success is because I can rely on a lot of people to help me stand out. I'm in the forefront of it all but no one should underestimate the infrastructure that I have around me to support what I and my partners (Paul LeBarge, cousin Lawrence Weinstein, and Randy Taylor) have built."

Weinstein tells young lawyers that the best advice she can give them is that they don't need others to discover them. "You have to discover yourself. Don't blame anyone else for the path you set. We can determine our own lives. Don't let others pull you down. Deal honestly with others."

She has found that being a woman and being Jewish have never hindered her in her career but, in fact, have been assets. She is one of very few women in her law specialty, and has "never stopped talking about the fact that [she] was a woman and Jewish."

"I think any ethnicity that sets you apart is a tremendous benefit because you can actually give perspectives from your ethnicity rather than a white bread and mayonnaise perspective."

Judaism, however, is not just an asset used for business purposes. For Weinstein, it's a good part of her identity.

"It isn't as much religious as it is spiritual," she says. "Judaism is at the very foundation of my personality and my family. I'd be lost without it. What would I be if not Jewish?"

Success is measured in many things, yet it is probably safe to say that Weinstein is indeed successful, and not just in her career. Professional accolades aside, Weinstein is the mother of six-year-old twins, Alexander and Rachel, both of whom attend Hillel Academy, and four-year-old Daniel, a Montessori student. Weinstein is also a committed community volunteer. And she is hoping that, by example, her children will follow along.

"I think it's very important to get my kids doing some volunteer work. My children, like so many in our community, are so privileged and really don't understand how good they've got it. It's very important that they see the real side of life and so whether that's doing something in a hospital or a shelter or the Food Bank, I intend to go with my kids and do that sooner rather than later."

Her paternal grandmother who died when her father was a teenager, used to invite greenhorns right off the boat to board with her, immigrants who had come to the goldene medina not knowing a soul. From those experiences, Weinstein learned that you do everything within your power to help.

"You open up your hands, you open up your heart, you do what you can when it's asked and sometimes when it's not asked, because it's the right thing to do."

"If people call on me, I always try to help. If you give a helping hand, there will always be someone to help you. Hands are needed from many places."

So, even with three young children and a demanding and stressful life which includes sitting on boards such as MOSAID and Jettom to name just a few, as well as lecturing and publishing, Weinstein makes time for volunteer work. She's on the board of the Ottawa Heart Institute Foundation and fund-raises for the Queensway-Carleton Hospital's Leadership Campaign and for the Youville Centre for Women. She was a member of the technical subcommittee for the Soloway JCC and years ago was on the Vaad's political liaison committee and on the executive of Na'amat Ottawa. Most of the boards she sits on now meet at 7:30 in the morning; she has tried to keep to things that don't take her away from her children at night. In fact, she recently had to turn down an appeal to be on the board of directors for United Way since, as she puts it, she would not have been able to give fair treatment to any more charitable organizations at this point.

"I've had to start saying no because if I can't do something right, there's no point in doing it at all," she asserts. She is finding, too, that as her children get older, they need her more. And although Weinstein deals with high-powered CEOs and executives on a daily basis, she has yet to meet any as challenging as her own children.

"I have found that at work I can speak loudly and forcefully but at home, they're always interrupting," she laughs. "I've had to learn that everything I'm in control of at work, I'm not in control of at home and it's been a good lesson."

What has helped to keep things in perspective for her and her family have been their weekend getaways to the cottage. From Friday evenings to Sunday afternoons throughout the year, they are there as a family, not working but playing; not running errands, just being together.

"As I look at my next goals, it's to try over time to be as successful in touching people in social matters as I've been in the corporate world," says Weinstein. "I really respect people like Roger Greenberg who, along with others, single-handedly did so much for the [Jewish] community in the way he went around fund-raising for the SJCC. He gave up so much of his personal time and his family time; the community owes a great service to people like that."

Chaim Weizmann once said that miracles sometimes occur, but one has to work terribly hard for them. Debbie Weinstein would probably agree. But then she would probably add that not accepting failure and choosing solutions instead are the active ingredients to miracle-making.

Her recipe seems to be working.

SIXTY SOMETHING

RUTH WEITZ

Birthdays
and memories

Molly Picon said, "Age is a problem to many people. It isn't for me. I've not the time to bother with it. I think it's just a matter of genes and luck."

James Thurber at age 59 said, "With 60 staring me in the face, I have developed inflammation of the sentence structure and a definite hardening of the paragraphs."

Ruth Weitz, 59 a long time ago, said, "I am somewhere in between Thurber and Picon." Big difference is I'm still here and looking forward to staying around for a long time to come. As long as the marbles stay in my skull and my editor lets me continue writing, I'll be in touch. So be kind and accept an occasional hardening of my paragraphs.

The years roll by at lightning speed. I don't feel older than I did last year. I don't feel older than I did 10 - 20 years ago. Thirty years ago? Maybe. Although the number of my years keeps getting higher, my heart and soul remain young.

I am still active but don't trust people who think they can do anything at 60 that they did at 20. If that is true, then they didn't do much at 20.

In my temple of memory I am able to recall in detail so many events of my life. Not just the big things that we all never forget but little things that you would think had flown with the years.

I remember the party my mother made for me when I was "Sweet Sixteen". Are those words still used today? I was just beginning to date.

Do you remember playing 'Post Office'? At my Sweet Sixteen party, we played that game. We also played 'Spin the Bottle'. Boys and girls sat around on the floor in a circle. Everyone took turns spinning an empty milk bottle in the centre of the group. When the bottle stopped spinning, whomever it faced got kissed by the spinner. With everyone in the room, including parents, a peck on the cheek was the kiss.

My mom put a marching record on our Victrola and my friends and I lined up in the hall, then marched around the dining room table a couple of times before taking our seats to eat the birthday cake my mom had baked.

And of course, my parents stayed with us until the guests left. Do you remember your first formal affair? Did you men have to rent a tuxedo or were you rich enough to buy your own? Do you ladies remember your first formal gown? I do. It was white organdy embroidered all over with yellow daisies. I was invited to a university prom by Myron who was a junior. I cannot recall his face or anything else about him, except I know he called the day before to ask the color of my gown so he could match a corsage. Nice boys did that in those long ago days.

Nostalgia prevents me from throwing things away. I opened a book of poetry I hadn't opened in years and discovered a very dead corsage was still pressed between the pages. I haven't the vaguest idea who gave it to me or how ancient it is. I did the unthinkable. I threw it away. Not the book, the corsage.

I'm glad the music I danced to when I was young was soft and low. The words, corny as they sound today, were so, so, stupid maybe - but sweet. It was so romantic watching Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers and hearing the words to the music of Irving Berlin, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy singing together made me dream of romance. Thinking back, they really were pretty had, weren't they? But today we don't hear June/moon or dance/romance rhyming. I can't write the words splitting our ears today. Not in a respectable Jewish paper, I can't.

Happy birthday to me and to all of you. I don't know about you but next year I will be a year younger because, to tell you the truth, I count backward. So don't believe me when I tell you I'm 47.

Art Works/ Rose Ann Hoffenberg Honoré Daumier, THE THIRD-CLASS CARRIAGE (detail), 1862-64 National Gallery of Canada

Did you know the name Honoré Daumier before this summer? Many people did not. Although famous, Daumier remains a relatively unknown artist.

Why would a prolific, gifted draughtsman, printmaker, painter and sculptor suffer such a fate? The answer lies in 19th century Europe where a prescribed subject matter, medium, and training were essential to obtain acceptance. For example, historical themes were preferred over genre scenes, oil paintings were valued over watercolors and prints, and students from the Ecole des Beaux Arts were held in greater esteem than those who were self-taught.

Daumier was obliged to contribute to the family income at an early age and therefore he had neither time nor money to study art in the conventional manner. When he decided to become an artist he apprenticed with a lithographer, gaining the skills that became the foundation of his career as a caricaturist with the Parisian Republican newspaper, La Caricature. Daumier was a man of his times, looking critically at French contemporary society.

The young artist rashly signed the print Gargantua only to find out that his commentary landed him in jail when he criticized the corrupt monarchy of Louis-Philippe. Eventually all political caricature was banned by the government which resulted in La Caricature closing down, but Le Charivari took its place with critical social commentary (albeit censored) replacing political.

Robert Macaire, the subject of Daumier's imagination, is a legendary rascal who revels in the opportunities created by the Industrial Revolution: to swindle the public. Humorous marital situations, feminists who take themselves too seriously, and lawyers filled with their own self-importance are all mocked by the artist. At the same time there is a serious side to Daumier as seen in his tender depiction of the Fugitives, Saltimbanques, Washerwomen, the theatre (on stage and off) and train travel.

When Baron Georges-Eugène Haussmann was hired by Louis-Napoléon, in the 1850s, to make Paris worthy of its reputation as a great European capital, wide, stately boulevards were created at the expense of working class neighborhoods. The displaced families were forced to move to the suburbs and commute long distances back into the city centre for their work. Although Daumier portrays humorously the discomforts of this modern travel in cramped situations such as a vain, obese woman attempting to sit in a seat of half the required size, in The

Honoré Daumier,
The Third-class Carriage (detail), 1862-64

Third-class Carriage (see detail in photograph) there is no element of satire. Here the artist shows the heroic dignity of a working class family in its weary but steadfast bearing.

Immigrants, clowns and working people were not popular subjects for "high" art in the 19th century, nor were Daumier's prints and sculptures with virulent, anti-establishment commentary. His prints were often seized before they went to press and the images that passed censorship and then printed in the mass media were not collected as rare works of art. Therefore, it is no wonder that Daumier is famous but unknown.

Michael Pantazzi, curator of DAUMIER, has done a great deal to change this conundrum in the current retrospective exhibition at the National Gallery of Canada by showing that it was the same gifted artist who made drawings, prints, paintings and sculpture. You will be treated to this indepth exposure of the complete artist, in Ottawa, until September 6, 1999. It runs simultaneously with an exhibition of IRISES by VINCENT VAN GOGH, another "unknown artist" in the 19th century.

Community honors Doris Bronstein by renaming Foundation fund

By Estelle Melzer

Doris (Dodo) Bronstein, principal of Ottawa Talmud Torah Afternoon School for 16 years, retired at the end of this school year. "Doris has had such a positive, long-lasting impact on the school and the lives of our children. We know her influence will be felt in this community for generations to come," said Naomi Lipsky Cracower, a member of the committee planning a tribute for Bronstein.

The committee, chaired by Barbara Deiner and Sharon Kessel, wanted to honor Bronstein in a way that would reflect her contributions to the school, the community and the future. They found the perfect vehicle in the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation.

Lipsky Cracower, who sits on the Foundation board, explained that all Foundation funds are invested in perpetuity. Only the net income is distributed annually. Thus by establishing a fund in Bronstein's name, she will be linked forever to the school and community she has worked so hard to enhance.

There were many emotional moments at the tribute brunch for Bronstein on June 13, which included a presentation by the school's Grade 7 class and a keynote address by Zelaïne Shinder, chair of the Board of Jewish Education. The climax of the tribute was the renaming of the school's Foundation fund in her honor.

Friends and admirers of Bronstein had contributed over $14,000 to the Doris Bronstein Talmud Torah Afternoon School Fund!

In accepting the check on behalf of the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation, Lipsky Cracower noted that "the gifts you make to the Doris Bronstein Talmud Torah Afternoon School Fund will enrich the Jewish education of your children, your grandchildren and the many generations to come. By establishing this fund, you are truly building a strong foundation for our community."

This year, the Ottawa Jewish Community

Foundation is celebrating its silver anniversary. It was established 25 years ago to be a permanent funding source for the enhancement of Jewish life in Ottawa. Today it plays a vital role in meeting present and future community needs.

"We would like the entire community to join in our celebration this year," exclaims President Norm Lesh. "Whether you are an organization, a family or an individual, whether your means are substantial or modest, you can join the Foundation family of funds. Establishing a Foundation fund in our anniversary year is a wonderful and permanent way to honor someone while fulfilling the mitzvah of tzedakah."

To find out more about the many options and benefits of Foundation giving, call Executive Director Gordon Roston (798-4696, ext. 272). To make a gift to the Doris Bronstein Talmud Torah Afternoon School Fund, call Kayla Mallay (798-4696, ext. 274).

In Appreciation

We are so grateful to the many well wishers who expressed such warm sentiments on the birth of our grandson, Avraham Zvi Elimelekh Bulka.

As well, we deeply appreciate the kind greetings and gestures following the receipt of the Gilbert Greenberg Distinguished Service Award.

Additionally, heartfelt thanks to the many members of the community for their sponsorship for Tour Nortel, the UJA Walk for Life and the CHEO Charithon.

May you all have abundant joy in your families in good health and vigour.
